Written Narrative for Star of Life nominee Glen Russel

September 18, 2014 began as a normal day for Glen Russel, except for a little heartburn that morning as he went into work at Lowe's of Cookeville. Little did he know that this would become one of the most important days of his life. He collapsed on the floor at approximately 2:45 P.M. that day without a pulse. No one saw him collapse initially, but when his coworkers found him, they immediately took action. They called 911 and reported a diabetic problem due to their familiarity with his history. Alissa Crouch, who had just been trained in CPR weeks earlier in her nursing class, saw that he wasn't breathing and began CPR. She continued until Cookeville Fire Department personnel arrived on scene and continued treatment. Moments later, Putnam County EMS arrived and continued care and defibrillated Mr. Russel. After continued treatment, he regained a pulse. Medical personnel prepared him for transport, but during this time, Glen became pulseless again. They shocked again and did CPR, after which he regained a pulse and kept it for the remainder of transport. The paramedics performed a 12 lead ECG, saw that he was having a heart attack, and radioed in a STEMI alert to the hospital. Which prepared the cardiology team for Glen's arrival. They quickly prepared him and successfully placed a stent in one of his coronary arteries, which was completely blocked. Glen is thankful today for a brave coworker who wasn't afraid to act, and for dedicated EMS and first responder personnel. Working together, these people saved his life.

Why I think the EMS Star of Life Award should be given to the nominees:

This case is a great example of the value of layperson CPR. Had Alissa not acted quickly, Glen would have had a much lower chance of survival. This case also shows the value of interagency involvement in responses to unresponsive patients. Putnam County 911, Cookeville Fire Department and Putnam County EMS worked seamlessly together to provide the best care for the patient. Prehospital 12 lead and early activation of the cath lab for STEMI are also evident in this case, aiding in a good outcome for the patient.
